ABOUT SAM

Sam is a 17-year-old high school junior from a small town in central Pennsylvania. He is currently signing up for a few college visits. He's particularly interested in adding CWRU to his list of school visits because he's read several articles about the university's political science program. His parents scrupulously saved for his education, and will support him throughout his college years so he can fully enjoy the experience. He's very close to his parents so he'd like to select a university that isn't too far away from home.

He would like the opportunity to intern while in college, and gain real-world experience while earning his degree. Sam would also like to spend at least one semester abroad immersing himself in foreign cultures and would like to find out what opportunities CWRU offers to its students. He's concerned about making friends once he gets to college, and would like to select a school that's surrounded by a lot of activity.

He owns a Samsung Galaxy phone, a Microsoft Surface tablet and a Lenovo laptop. He's an avid social media user and stays up to date on the newest platforms. In his free time, he likes to dabble in open source coding.
